

Abstract

A float glass chamber and related methods comprising a hot section having an atmosphere in at least the lower plenum comprises less than 3 percent hydrogen based on volume and a cold section, wherein the boundary line between the hot

- 5 section and the cold section is where the temperature of the glass falls below a threshold temperature